OHIO PEN RIOT COSTS $1 MILLION

2,000 Inmates Cause Havoc For 6 Hours

'Hell On Halloween' Comes As Convicts Grip About Food

COLUMBUS, Nov. 1 — (AP)—Six hours of hell on Halloween—a $1 million "bad food" riot by 2,000 convicts—swept century-old Ohio Penitentiary Friday night.

Eight buildings went up in flames. Furnishings and equipment were savagely beaten into wreckage.

A state highway patrolman, mistaken for an escaping convict, was wounded slightly on the head by a quick-shooting guard. No one else was injured; no prisoner escaped; no hostage was taken.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche flew to Columbus from Cleveland to take charge of the offensive against the convicts.

Warden Ralph Alvis—the "Big Red" that several convicts shouted was "the best warden in the world"—pleaded by loudspeaker with the convicts three times. It was shortly after his last appeal that the virtual end to the mutiny came.

MILLING CONVICTS, spurred to anger by the needling of ringleaders, threatened for a time to attempt a mass escape over the prison's 30-foot wall. Thirty-five grim guards, armed with sub-machine-guns, stood their ground. But somehow the escape attempt never jelled.

Quickly the state and city marshaled forces, pouring 250 guards and officers into the flaming prison compound. Six hundred Ohio National Guardsmen, rounded up from Central and Southern Ohio, mobilized before the sudden collapse of the revolt.

A scheduled 10:30 p. m. offensive by the National Guard became unnecessary. Cold, hungry, beaten, most of the rebellious convicts moved back into the cell blocks minutes before the Guard planned to march into the penitentiary.

Aid for the beleaguered guards at the penitentiary came more quickly than at many places, perhaps because many Ohioans remembered Easter Monday 1930. That was the day convicts fired a cell block in a wild escape plot. The fire caused the deaths of 322.

'Better Boys' Try To Save Chapel In Pen

COLUMBUS, Nov. 1 — (AP)—"I'll help you straighten out the chapel, father," said one convict.

"Yeah, I'm a good worker too," said another.

It was more than eight hours after the riot that brought an estimated $1 million in damage to Ohio Penitentiary Friday night.

The Rev. C. Valerian Lucier, Catholic chaplain at the prison, stood beside the handful of things "some of the better boys" dragged out of his chapel before it was gutted by flames.

A half-dozen inmates stood beside him. Lucier made no reply to the offer of help in cleaning up the chapel. Instead, he turned and stared at his church as firemen stood helplessly, unable to do anything about the blaze.

Finally the priest, who had stayed among the prisoners in the courtyard even at the height of the violence turned and said:

"You know, some of the better boys actually tried to save my chapel."

One convict, tall and muscular, said, "I didn't help tear it up but I'll do my share when it comes to fixin' it up."

A fellow inmate was quick to reply: "That's what everyone is gonna say—I didn't do it—but you don't think they're gonna believe you do you?"

Hillsboro Soldier Held In Accident

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 1 — (AP)—Bradley E. Blankenship, 21-year-old soldier from Hillsboro, O., is free on $1,000 bond following his arrest on a manslaughter warrant. He was picked up by police as he left St. Joseph Hospital where he had been undergoing treatment for injuries received in an Oct. 24 auto-truck collision. Mrs. Virginia McQueen, 30, of Lexington, a passenger in the car driven by Blankenship, was killed. The youth will face a hearing here Nov. 6.

CLIMBING AN EXTENSION ladder, a fireman (left) pours a stream of water over one of the Ohio penitentiary walls onto one of eight buildings set afire by some 1,200 rioting convicts. The Ohio pen outbreak followed by a few hours the riots at Menard prison near Chester, Ill. Ohio Gov. Frank Lausche rushed to the prison from Cleveland, but arrived when the riot had ended. Circleville National Guard Company was called out to give aid, also.

City's Infantry Guard Unit Gives Aid In Ohio Pen Riot

Circleville emergency units and business men, alerted by the fire department's "66" riot call, swung into fast and effective teamwork Friday night to send Circleville's National Guard company to the riot-torn Columbus penitentiary.

Roundup of the members of Company I, 166th Infantry Company, began immediately when Lt. John McGinnis, company commander, received orders for mobilization and asked for the fire department's assistance.

The "66" call was sounded at about 7 p. m.

In addition to prompt help by the fire branch, McGinnis paid special tribute to rapid aid he received from Pickaway County Sheriff's office and city police.

"The way (Pickaway County Sheriff) Charley Radcliff's men and the city police department turned in to help us round up our men was truly something to encourage all the guardsmen," McGinnis said.

"Like all the other help we received during the evening it reminded us again on how closely Circleville can team up when there's urgent need to do it."

THE SHERIFF'S office maintained constant touch with progress of the guard mobilization here and with the dangerous situation at the Columbus prison.

Circleville police served as escort for the two semi-trailer trucks and jeeps which hauled the Guardsmen to Columbus.

To obtain transportation for his unit, which has a present strength of two officers and 57 enlisted men, McGinnis called James I. Smith.

"At first I hoped to get school buses," Smith said, "but I found this couldn't be done on short notice. Then I got in touch with

New Wrinkle Developed In 'Pup Disposal'

Having trouble getting rid of surplus pups?

Someone in that predicament developed a new wrinkle in "pup disposal" Saturday in Downtown Circleville.

Two little girls early Saturday were proudly parading their new pups up and down the sidewalks. Drawn by the attractiveness of the tykes and their proud possessors, passers-by learned the animals were gifts.

"A man gave 'em to us," one little girl volunteered. "Mama doesn't know about this yet," she added, looking forward to the joy with which "Mama" will receive the good news.

Further, when asked what kind of dogs they had, they replied: "They're hunters."

The man discovering the new "pup disposal" idea had outfitted the puppies with collars and leashes to make them more attractive to susceptible children.

Merle F. Thornton and he agreed immediately to loan one of his trucks.

"The other truck came just as promptly from the Crites Milling Co. I told George Crites what was going on, asked for a truck and he said 'sure'."

THE CRITES TRUCK was driven by Forrest Easterday. Thornton rode in the cab of his own truck, accompanied by Wayne Martin as driver.

Columbus television and radio stations, contacted by McGinnis, also helped in the mobilization here with emergency announcements.

McGinnis and 44 enlisted men made the trip to Columbus.

Circleville fire department, only a short time after stopping a dangerous fire that swept over a wide section of Washington Township, maintained a "standby alert" during the emergency. The local fire department has a mutual aid agreement with the Columbus department in event it's needed during a major conflagration.

Television and radio broadcasters through most of the evening described fires raging out of control at the penitentiary.

Inside the armory, while guardsmen were donning full combat equipment, the scene was similar to that of the night of Sept. 8 when the local company was mobilized for a riot at the Chillicothe penitentiary.

Guardsmen, several of them members of the unit only a few weeks, readied their packs and other gear in an atmosphere heavy with tension and the smell of moth-balls. Much of the equipment had been stored away following the Chillicothe emergency and had to be hurriedly distributed again.

"WE HAVE two sizes," a guardsman handing out battle-jackets laughed, "too big and too small."

Light humor also prevailed in a group where Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bosworth of West Ohio street stood watching the preparations of their son, Dorsey. With Bosworth was a fellow-guardsmen, Joe Sweazy, of 220 West High street.

Both soldiers joked at the weight of their helmets and joined laughingly in the hope that "things cool off pretty soon up there in Columbus." Large fires were burning at the time inside the penitentiary.

Mrs. Dan Gilmore, who has two sons in the local guard unit, stood with the Bosworths to watch the men prepare for the trip. A number of other relatives likewise stood by in and outside the armory.

Addressing the company immediately before its departure, McGinnis outlined the emergency and added:

"We don't know what the score is just yet, but we're going up and find out."

"Aha!" one of the guardsmen shouted as the men filed out of the building and saw the trucks, "Sem-eyes! We ride in class!"

From the rear of one of the trucks as the convoy moved away with its escort, Guardsman Bob Wilkinson shouted: "Tell Ned Dresbach I won't be to work in the morning, will ya?"

City Charter--Step By Step

Throughout the last six weeks the Citizens Committee has attempted to explain outstanding provisions of the charter to be placed before the voters of Circleville for approval next Tuesday.

It has always been the belief of this committee that the people of Circleville want a better form of local government. To accomplish this, the charter was framed and submitted for the people to pass upon.

No question exists that the proposed charter is a good charter and will do much to improve local government. It is not a cure-all, but it is a better plan than we now have. Circleville has changed, and there is a crying need for a reformed system of government.

If you understand the charter, what it will do, and have the welfare of the city in mind, you should vote "yes" for the charter.

The opposition to the charter has been led by two ward councilmen and the mayor. One councilman has repeatedly stated that the charter is un-American, that it takes away the people's right to vote. Nothing is more untrue.

These councilmen, one in the south end and one in the east end of the city, have canvassed their local voters on such misleading facts. How well are they representing the local people by the tactics used? The voters should honestly ask themselves just how good are their local councilmen.

ARE they constructive and honest in their thinking? Do they have the interest of the city in mind, or is it merely a local political plum for themselves?

Does the local ward voter realize that, under the present system, he has no vote on any other ward councilman? Do you voters not know that today three other ward councilmen are elected that you never even have the right to vote on?

Under the charter, each and every voter in the whole city would vote on every member of council. Is it un-American to have the right to vote on all of your councilmen? Remember, when these other ward councilmen vote on legislation affecting you in your ward, you have no way to vote against them. The charter will give you that right.

The people should not be against the charter, but ward politicians always will be. The politician knows that he can control a small group, but he has doubts on his ability to convince all the people. If your local ward councilman is not good enough to be elected by all the people of the city, he is not good enough to represent you in your ward.

The general history of cities with charter governments proves that more and better government is realized from the same money.

They have failed only in the cases where the politicians and not the people control them. The charter does not increase city government costs nor does it provide for any kind of new taxes as has been claimed.

The charter question will appear on a separate ballot called "The Questions and Issues Ballot." Don't vote "no" unless you want a ward-heeler to represent you.

If you want an efficient, business-like government by all the people for the good of all the people, vote "yes" for the charter.

Rok Troops Clawing Up Slopes Of Hill After Chinese Reds

Each Candidate Confident As Big Election Day Nears

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP)—The two major candidates for the presidency, Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower and Democrat Adlai Stevenson, were in the Midwest Saturday as the bitterly fought campaign drew toward a climax.

Each candidate is confident that victory will be his come election Day Tuesday.

Eisenhower pushed his campaign with the assertion that the American people are demanding a change and says "that demand will be satisfied four days from now."

Stevenson, ending his campaign through the industrial East, attacked his opponents foreign policy, saying the general is running on "a promise without a program."

As the campaign drew near an end, Eisenhower held to what he says are the four central issues—"Korea, Communism, corruption and peace based on prosperity."

IN APPEARANCES here Friday, he said the Democrats are trying to fog over these questions by personal attack on him, and by spreading a fear campaign.

He ridiculed the personal criticisms by reminding his audiences that his opponents wanted him to be their candidate four years ago.

He said the people are not being frightened by Democratic claims that a GOP victory would mean another depression, cuts in Social Security and so on.

He told a Chicago audience:

"The extraordinary thing is that the opposition thought the American people would be so blind, so beaten down by seven years of Fair Deal misrule that they would not rise up and demand a change, a change to a government of honesty, vision and courage."

"But that demand will be satisfied—four days from now."

Victory claims are standard fixtures in every political campaign, but Eisenhower's statement reflects the atmosphere of optimism that is growing among his advisers now. They have noted reports from professional pollsters that indicate Stevenson may be gaining ground in this stretch phase of the race.

If the governor's stock is rising, they say, the upsurge is coming too late.

EISENHOWER'S top strategists believe they have a better-than-even chance to carry the two big doubtful states, New York and California. The third biggest, Pennsylvania, is considered in the bag. Together these three would mean 109 electoral votes. It takes 266 to win the presidency.

One of Eisenhower's lieutenants declared he has seen nothing to change the feeling that, this year, the Republicans have a chance to break into the solid bloc of Southern states.

Eisenhower's advisers consider Virginia the most likely possibility of a break. They put Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana and Texas—in that order—as the next most likely in their calculations.

As for Illinois, with 27 electoral votes, Eisenhower made the one-day trip in the hope that his appearance would tip the balance in what looks like a close race.

Meanwhile, Stevenson said that Eisenhower's pledge to go to Korea if he is elected was "a promise without a program" and he said he didn't think "that the American people are taken in."

He said the Republican presidential nominee was "seeking one easy solution after another for the Korean war" and attacked him for what he called a shift to the "Old Guard" line.

EISENHOWER, he said, had commented that if there must be war in Korea it should be "Asians against Asians."

"In 1939 the Republican Old Guard, faced with the menace of the Nazi world, was content to say, 'Let Europeans fight Europeans,' ignoring completely the fact that the menace of Nazism was a menace to Americans as much as to Frenchmen and Englishmen."

Stevenson asserted that the general had "recklessly gambled with the confidence of our European Allies" and had shown "a willingness to undermine" the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And on the Korean war, he said, Eisenhower has "sought out the possibilities of division and of mistrust."

Taking up Eisenhower's statement that he would go to Korea, Stevenson said that "unfortunately the ghost writer who provided the proposals failed to give the content" to a program.

"The general was to go to Korea but nobody indicated what he should do when he got there," the governor said.

Actually, he said, these are the only courses open in Korea:

"GET OUT, or enlarge the war, or purchase a truce to the abandonment of our moral position, or continue the negotiations with all of the resource and self-discipline on our command."

He said Eisenhower himself had now begun to talk about going to Korea to "improve our position" instead of ending the war.

This is admirable, he said, "but the label on the bottle is different and the contents are mis-branded."

It was the windup of Stevenson's efforts in the East before heading back into Ohio and Indiana Saturday with a major television address in Chicago Saturday night.

Heavy Losses Suffered To Block Enemy

Koreans Ignore Order To Retreat As Foe Comes On In Waves

SEOUL, Nov. 1 — (AP)—South Korean infantrymen clawed slowly up the shell-blasted slopes of Triangle Hill Saturday while Allied warplanes blasted the Chinese—held crest in an effort to cut down Red firepower.

The indomitable Reds were fighting to regain the prized central front peak where hundreds of their countrymen, in "gallant disobedience of orders," sacrificed themselves to block a Red smash into the main Allied line.

Ordered to retreat when the Chinese attacked in waves before dawn, they stayed and died on the barren peak.

The way back was slow and bloody. But Allied air strikes at the crest were slowing the Communist fire.

Other Allied troops fought off Chinese battalion attacks against Jane Russell Hill, a lesser ridge on Triangle, and Pinpoint Hill, highest peak on nearby Sniper Ridge.

The 19 days of continuous battling for the Kumbwa ridges has piled up the longest and bloodiest fighting of the last year.

COMMUNIST battalions also attacked an Allied outpost just west of the Triangle-Sniper sector and four outposts south of Panmunjom on the western front. They were repulsed in hand-to-hand fighting.

Allied troops in the Panmunjom area struck back shortly before noon with a two-hour tank-infantry raid that killed or wounded an estimated 500 Reds.

The tanks caught Chinese troops moving in the open. South Koreans called it a "No. 1 battle."

Fifteen miles south of Triangle-Sniper, 25,000 South Koreans were reported evacuating the road-rail hub of Chuncheon under a joint order of the Eighth Army and Republic of Korea government.

A Pusan dispatch said the evacuation must be completed by Wednesday.

In the past such evacuation orders have been given prior to a major Communist offensive. Chuncheon, on a main invasion route to Seoul, was the scene of bitter fighting last year in the Red drive on the South Korean capital.

In the air war, U. S. Sabrejets tangled with Red MiGs north of Sinanju in Northwest Korea.

The Fifth Air Force said its Sabrejet pilots shot down 26 MiGs during October. This compared with 27 Allied planes lost behind Communist lines during the month, including five shot down in air combat. Fourteen were shot down by Red anti-aircraft fire. The other eight failed to return for unknown reasons. No Allied planes were lost in air combat during the last week.

Absent Voter Total High For Tuesday Election

More absent voter ballots have been received by the Pickaway County board of elections office to date than in any other year except 1944.

Mrs. Nellie Stout, clerk to the election board, said 276 civilian absent votes have been cast, while 83 soldier votes have been received to date.

Mrs. Stout added this year's total to date is larger than any previous year except 1944, when so many county men were in the service, swelling that year's total.

All absent voter ballots are to be sent to the voters' polls on election day for counting there.

AS A FINAL phase to Tuesday's election preparations, the county election board met Saturday to prepare supplies for the polls.

Receiving judges of each precinct are to pick up their voting supplies Saturday afternoon.

What Did They Actually Say?

For the last four months, John Q. Voter has been bombarded by thousands of words by and for the two men seeking to become President of the U. S.

In this deluge, John Q. may not have heard the "meat" in the statements of the two candidates, Republican Dwight Eisenhower and Democrat Adlai Stevenson.

In this torrent of words, the two men have stated their beliefs on the major issues: Korea, corruption, Communism and McCarthy.

An unvarnished, unadorned summary of their words is carried in a story appearing on Page 6.

Charter Unit Head Blasts Back, Claim 'Falsehoods' Increasing

Pro-charter forces, stung by what they claim is "a stepped-up campaign of ridiculous statements" from the opposition, uncorked a vigorous rebuttal in the sizzling controversy Saturday.

Chairman of the Citizens Committee, key charter group, said "silly versions" were allegedly given on the charter "by one of the leaders in the fight against it."

Meanwhile, Judge Ralph A. Stevens of probate court in Portsmouth gave vigorous defense to the city manager government idea.

Anti-charter forces Friday described Portsmouth's experience under the charter as a "warning" to Circleville voters. Voters here will decide on the charter proposal at next Tuesday's election.

Judge Stevens said: "In my opinion the charter has worked well and it has proven itself an efficient method of city government."

"IF WE were to abandon it—which we certainly aren't thinking of doing—it would be a tremendous step backward in Portsmouth's development."

"Naturally there is healthy opposition to the charter (in Portsmouth) and we don't claim that our city government is perfect. As a matter of fact, we'll vote on some amendments to it at the coming election."

"But that's only because we want to smooth out its operation in the light of experience."

Judge Stevens served six years on the municipal court bench in Portsmouth and said he has "had an excellent opportunity to watch the city government's operations at close range."

Meanwhile, Elliott Barnhill, head of the citizens group here, released

five allegedly "ridiculous statements" palmed off deliberately as charter facts by an anti-charter leader in a plant located in the southern end of the city.

A man secretly "converted" to the charter, Barnhill said, was given the information by the anti-charter leader, who apparently is unaware of the voters true beliefs.

THE "SILLY versions" listed by Barnhill were:

1. That the charter group intends to keep new business out of Circleville in order to keep down the costs of labor here. "As a matter of fact," Barnhill declared, "the charter encourages new business."
2. That automobiles would be taxed if they were parked on the street.
3. That the charter would definitely bring with it a city employment tax, "under which a man would have to pay a tax in order to get a job."
4. That the charter would also mean a city income tax.

1. That the charter invariably leads to dictatorship in municipal affairs.

"I'm not able to say just how these ridiculous statements were worded," Barnhill said. "at any rate they were palmed off sufficiently to give a clear-cut impression."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1 — (AP)—John L. Lewis and hard coal operators signed a new contract Saturday raising the wages of 65,000 anthracite miners $1.90 a day effective Nov. 16. This was the same boost granted soft coal workers but which the Wage Stabilization Board said was 40 cents a day too much.

Remember, when these other ward councilmen vote on legislation affecting you in your ward, you have no way to vote against them. The charter will give you that right.

The people should not be against the charter, but ward politicians always will be. The politician knows that he can control a small group, but he has doubts on his ability to convince all the people. If your local ward councilman is not good enough to be elected by all the people of the city, he is not good enough to represent you in your ward.

The general history of cities with charter governments proves that more and better government is realized from the same money. They have failed only in the cases where the politicians and not the people control them. The charter does not increase city government costs nor does it provide for any kind of new taxes as has been claimed.

The charter question will appear on a separate ballot called "The Questions and Issues Ballot." Don't vote "no" unless you want a ward-heeler to represent you.

If you want an efficient, business-like government by all the people for the good of all the people, vote "yes" for the charter.

Each Candidate Confident As Big Election Day Nears

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—The two major candidates for the presidency, Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower and Democrat Adlai Stevenson, were in the Midwest Saturday as the bitterly fought campaign drew toward a climax.

Each candidate is confident that victory will be his come election Day Tuesday.

Eisenhower pushed his campaign with the assertion that the American people are demanding a change and says "that demand will be satisfied four days from now."

Stevenson, ending his campaign through the industrial East, attacked his opponents foreign policy, saying the general is running on "a promise without a program."

As the campaign drew near an end, Eisenhower held to what he says are the four central issues— "Korea, Communism, corruption and peace based on prosperity."

IN APPEARANCES here Friday, he said the Democrats are trying to fog over these questions by personal attack on him, and by spreading a fear campaign.

He ridiculed the personal criticisms by reminding his audiences that his opponents wanted him to be their candidate four years ago.

He said the people are not being frightened by Democratic claims that a GOP victory would mean another depression, cuts in Social Security and so on.

He told a Chicago audience: "The extraordinary thing is that the opposition thought the American people would be so blind, so beaten down by seven years of Fair Deal misrule that they would not rise up and demand a change, a change to a government of honesty, vision and courage."

"But that demand will be satisfied—four days from now."

Victory claims are standard fixtures in every political campaign, but Eisenhower's statement reflects the atmosphere of optimism that is growing among his advisers now. They have noted reports from professional pollsters that indicate Stevenson may be gaining ground in this stretch phase of the race.

If the governor's stock is rising, they say, the upsurge is coming too late.

EISENHOWER'S top strategists believe they have a better-than-even chance to carry the two big doubtful states, New York and California. The third biggest, Pennsylvania, is considered in the bag. Together these three would mean 109 electoral votes. It takes 266 to win the presidency.

One of Eisenhower's lieutenants declared he has seen nothing to change the feeling that, this year, the Republicans have a chance to break into the solid bloc of Southern states.

Eisenhower's advisers consider Virginia the most likely possibility of a break. They put Florida, South Carolina, Louisiana and Texas—in that order—as the next most likely in their calculations.

As for Illinois, with 27 electoral votes, Eisenhower made the one-day trip in the hope that his appearance would tip the balance in what looks like a close race.

Meanwhile, Stevenson said that Eisenhower's pledge to go to Korea if he is elected was "a promise without a program" and he said he didn't think "that the American people are taken in."

He said the Republican presidential nominee was "seeking one easy solution after another for the Korean war" and attacked him for what he called a shift to the "Old Guard" line.

EISENHOWER, he said, had commented that if there must be war in Korea it should be "Asians against Asians."

"In 1939 the Republican Old Guard, faced with the menace of the Nazi world, was content to say, 'Let Europeans fight Europeans,' ignoring completely the fact that the menace of Nazism was a menace to Americans as much as to Frenchmen and Englishmen."

Stevenson asserted that the general had "recklessly gambled with the confidence of our European Allies" and had shown "a willingness to undermine" the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And on the Korean war, he said, Eisenhower has "sought out the possibilities of division and of mistrust."

Taking up Eisenhower's statement that he would go to Korea, Stevenson said that "unfortunately the ghost writer who provided the proposals failed to give the content" to a program.

"The general was to go to Korea but nobody indicated what he should do when he got there," the governor said.

Actually, he said, these are the only courses open in Korea:

"GET OUT, or enlarge the war, or purchase a truce to the abandonment of our moral position, or continue the negotiations with all of the resource and self-discipline at our command."

He said Eisenhower himself had now begun to talk about going to Korea to "improve our position" instead of ending the war.

This is admirable, he said, "but the label on the bottle is different and the contents are misbranded."

It was the windup of Stevenson's efforts in the East before heading back into Ohio and Indiana Saturday with a major television address in Chicago Saturday night.

A Pusan dispatch said the evacuation must be completed by Wednesday.

In the past such evacuation orders have been given prior to a major Communist offensive. Chunchon, on a main invasion route to Seoul, was the scene of bitter fighting last year in the Red drive on the South Korean capital.

In the air war, U. S. Sabrejets tangled with Red MiGs north of Sinanju in Northwest Korea.

The Fifth Air Force said its Sabrejet pilots shot down 26 MiGs during October. This compared with 27 Allied planes lost behind Communist lines during the month, including five shot down in air combat. Fourteen were shot down by Red anti-aircraft fire. The other eight failed to return for unknown reasons. No Allied planes were lost in air combat during the last week.

Mrs. Nellie Stout, clerk to the election board, said 276 civilian absent votes have been cast, while 83 soldier votes have been received to date.

Mrs. Stout added this year's total to date is larger than any previous year except 1944, when so many county men were in the service, swelling that year's total.

All absent voter ballots are to be sent to the voters' polls on election day for counting there.

AS A FINAL phase to Tuesday's election preparations, the county election board met Saturday to prepare supplies for the polls.

Receiving judges of each precinct are to pick up their voting supplies Saturday afternoon.

Contract Signed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1 — (AP)—John L. Lewis and hard coal operators signed a new contract Saturday raising the wages of 65,000 anthracite miners $1.30 a day effective Nov. 16. This was the same boost granted soft coal workers but which the Wage Stabilization Board said was 40 cents a day too much.

What Did They Actually Say?

For the last four months, John Q. Voter has been bombarded by thousands of words by and for the two men seeking to become President of the U. S.

In this deluge, John Q. may not have heard the "meat" in the statements of the two candidates, Republican Dwight Eisenhower and Democrat Adlai Stevenson.

In this torrent of words, the two men have stated their beliefs on the major issues: Korea, corruption, Communism and McCarthy.

An unvarnished, unadorned summary of their words is carried in a story appearing on Page 6.

Meanwhile, Elliott Barnhill, head of the citizens group here, released

five allegedly "ridiculous statements" palmed off deliberately as charter facts by an anti-charter leader in a plant located in the southern end of the city.

A man secretly "converted" to the charter, Barnhill said, was given the information by the anti-charter leader, who apparently is unaware of the voters true beliefs.

THE "SILLY" versions" listed by Barnhill were:

1. That the charter group intends to keep new business out of Circleville in order to keep down the costs of labor here. "As a matter of fact," Barnhill declared, "the charter encourages new business."

2. That automobiles would be taxed if they were parked on the street.

3. That the charter would definitely bring with it a city employment tax, "under which a man would have to pay a tax in order to get a job."

4. That the charter would also mean a city income tax.

t. That the charter invariably leads to dictatorship in municipal affairs.

"I'm not able to say just how these ridiculous statements were worded," Barnhill said, "at any rate they were palmed off sufficiently to give a clear-cut impression."

Heavy Losses Suffered To Block Enemy

Koreans Ignore Order To Retreat As Foe Comes On In Waves

SEOUL, Nov. 1 — (AP)—South Korean infantrymen clawed slowly up the shell-blasted slopes of Triangle Hill Saturday while Allied warplanes blasted the Chinese — held crest in an effort to cut down Red firepower.

The indomitable Rokhs were fighting to regain the prized central front peak where hundreds of their countrymen, in "gallant disobedience of orders," sacrificed themselves to block a Red smash into the main Allied line.

Ordered to retreat when the Chinese attacked in waves before dawn, they stayed and died on the barren peak.

The way back was slow and bloody. But Allied air strikes at the crest were slowing the Communist fire.

Other Allied troops fought off Chinese battalion attacks against Jane Russell Hill, a lesser ridge on Triangle, and Pinpoint Hill, highest peak on nearby Sniper Ridge.

The 19 days of continuous battling for the Kumbwa ridges has piled up the longest and bloodiest fighting of the last year.

COMMUNIST battalions also attacked an Allied outpost just west of the Triangle-Sniper sector and four outposts south of Panmunjom on the western front. They were repulsed in hand-to-hand fighting.

Allied troops in the Panmunjom area struck back shortly before noon with a two-hour tank-infantry raid that killed or wounded an estimated 500 Reds.

The tanks caught Chinese troops moving in the open. South Koreans called it a "No. 1 battle."

Fifteen miles south of Triangle-Sniper, 25,000 South Koreans were reported evacuating the road-rail hub of Chunchon under a joint order of the Eighth Army and Republic of Korea government.

A Pusan dispatch said the evacuation must be completed by Wednesday.

In the past such evacuation orders have been given prior to a major Communist offensive. Chunchon, on a main invasion route to Seoul, was the scene of bitter fighting last year in the Red drive on the South Korean capital.

Absent Voter Total High For Tuesday Election

More absent voter ballots have been received by the Pickaway County board of elections office to date than in any other year except 1944.

Referring to the anti-charter comments Friday, Barnhill said: "Incidentally, my wife was born and raised in Portsmouth and knows a great deal about that city. She lived there through the early years of the charter government."

"A school teacher at the time, Mrs. Barnhill remembers that the charter government paid the city school teachers in cash during the depression—while even so many others were paying theirs in script."

Barnhill also quoted "a high official in the Portsmouth city school organization" as follows:

"ALTHOUGH there are naturally some things about the Portsmouth charter that need fixing, we're so much better under it than we were before that it's pathetic we didn't get it long before we did."

A former city manager of Portsmouth, Barnhill said, is now reliably reported to be city manager at St. Petersburg, Fla., "and doing a wonderful job there."

"By the way," the citizens group leader said, "all this excitement when city managers lose their jobs in different parts of the country is giving the anti-charter people a bum steer. It's a talking point for us and not for the opposition."

"It illustrates how city managers either have to produce results or give up their jobs. Circleville voters must remember you can't get rid of mayors that easily."

If it's true the city manager at Portsmouth has an "assistant," Barnhill declared, "it certainly means nothing when you consider the size of that city and the way it's booming in growth, especially now due to plans for the atomic energy plant in Pike County."

Barnhill said opponents "went into strange ground when they decided to discuss the municipal court." Barnhill emphasized that Chillicothe, in the first year of its municipal court, is said to have had a net profit of $30,000.

"As for the feeling that nobody on the present council in Circleville would be willing or able to take the mayor's responsibilities," Barnhill concluded, "I think it's best to leave that amazing statement for the men whose ability he belittled."

"They were probably as surprised to see the comment as we were."

Letter To The Editor

The Circleville Herald encourages letters to the editor on pertinent subjects of local interest. However, unsigned letters will be disregarded. No do volume will be used if requested.

EDITOR, THE HERALD:
Mayor Amey made a grievous error Friday when he presented his article on Portsmouth city manager administration.

He should have avoided mention of a municipal court. He should never have mentioned municipal court under any circumstance.

Supposing you were mayor under our present set-up and you received the major portion of your earnings from a mayor's court; and you saw that Gravy Bowl being taken away from you.

Your articles to a newspaper might sound as if your only concern was for the welfare of your fair city, but primarily it would relate to your continued possession of the Gravy Bowl.

If, as Mr. Amey states, no member of the council under the city manager type of government wanted the onerous duties of serving as mayor, (with the Gravy Bowl still attached and the city manager saw the opportunity of very greatly increasing the revenue to the city by creation of a municipal court, is it not reasonable to suppose that a court of this nature would be one of his first recommendations?

Chillicothe has a municipal court which pays dividends, as do all similar municipal court operations. Robert L. Brehmer North Court Street

McDonald Returns To Reformatory

Eugene McDonald of Circleville, an Ohio reformatory parolee, was returned to Mansfield Reformatory Friday by Portland, Me., authorities as a fugitive from justice.

McDonald was to be readmitted into Mansfield for violation of parole granted him last May on a forgery sentence.

The Circleville man was shot in the head last month in a rooming house in Portland during a scuffle with a Circleville Route 4 teenage girl.

The girl was returned to her home here last week when she was cleared of blame in the shooting.

Youth Paralyzed By Intoxication

A 16-year-old Circleville youth was taken into custody Friday night by city police in a state of near paralysis from intoxication.

The youth was found lying in an od car on East Corwin street by Officers Roy Hawks, Bernard Tait and John White.

Police said the youth was unable to move when they found him. Later, he told police he had "found the intoxicant which he drank."

prisoners, the biggest toll of any prison fire.

The outbreak of the rebellion kept up an hour by the flashing knives of a dozen case-hardened convicts, who goaded 600 fellow prisoners into keeping up their defiance.

POSSIBLY 100 diehards lingered in the courtyard after the mutiny had fallen apart, eventually forcing guards to bomb them out with tear gas.

The outbreak, primed by a series of other uprisings in prisons across the nation, began in the mess hall at dinner time. Like a flash fire, the mutiny spread until it involved nearly one-half the prison's 4,000-odd population.

The first act of the Halloween drama was brief. Eight hundred of the original 2,000 convicts quickly agreed to return to their cells.

That left 1,200. Guards thought the back of the rebellion, staged to protest food the convicts called "slop" or worse, had been broken.

Just as quickly, the second act started—an uncontrolled riot by 1,200 convicts in the face of a total guard force of 35. Fire after fire broke out.

At one time, about three hours after the riot started, Warden Alvis said, "Nearly every major building is burning out of control."

Firemen, balked by the mass of convicts and the slowness of the guard force, tried ineffectually to fight the sprouting flames from roof tops and wall ladders.

FIRE DESTROYED five buildings — the commissary, Catholic chapel, laundry, personnel building and prison hospital. About 130 hospital patients were removed safely.

Fire and vandalism seriously damaged the auditorium, mess hall and kitchen.

The convicts, including some of the hardest characters in the Midwest, armed themselves with meat cleavers, sharpened spoons, files, knives, anything that would kill.

They smashed windows, jeered at the guards and screamed curses.

Two hours before the end, four hundred more convicts lost their nerve and sneaked back through the burning buildings to their cell blocks. Then another 200 gave up.

That left 600 still roaming and huddling around small fires.

These were the men threatened to the last by the knife-wielding fanatics, who finally succumbed to the pressure of 250 peace officers and prison guards.

Referring to the anti-charter comments Friday, Barnhill said: "Incidentally, my wife was born and raised in Portsmouth and knows a great deal about that city. She lived there through the early years of the charter government."

"A school teacher at the time, Mrs. Barnhill remembers that the charter government paid the city school teachers in cash during the depression—while ever so many others were paying theirs in script."

Barnhill also quoted "a high official in the Portsmouth city school organization" as follows:

"ALTHOUGH there are naturally some things about the Portsmouth charter that need fixing, we're so much better under it than we were before that it's pathetic we didn't get it long before we did."

A former city manager of Portsmouth, Barnhill said, is now reliably reported to be city manager at St. Petersburg, Fla., "and doing a wonderful job there."

"By the way," the citizens group leader said, "all this excitement when city managers lose their jobs in different parts of the country is giving the anti-charter people a bum steer. It's a talking point for us and not for the opposition."

"It illustrates how city managers either have to produce results or give up their jobs. Circleville voters must remember you can't get rid of mayors that easily."

If it's true the city manager at Portsmouth has an "assistant," Barnhill declared, "it certainly means nothing when you consider the size of that city and the way it's booming in growth, especially now due to plans for the atomic energy plant in Pike County."

Barnhill said opponents "went into strange ground when they decided to discuss the municipal court." Barnhill emphasized that Chillicothe, in the first year of its municipal court, is said to have had a net profit of $30,000.

"As for the feeling that nobody on the present council in Circleville would be willing or able to take the mayor's responsibilities," Barnhill concluded, "I think it's best to leave that amazing statement for the men whose ability he belittled."

"They were probably as surprised to see the comment as we were."

Letter To The Editor

The Circleville Herald encourages letters to the editor on pertinent subjects of local interest. However, unsigned letters will be disregarded. No do plume will be used if requested.

EDITOR, THE HERALD:

Mayor Amey made a grievous error Friday when he presented his article on Portsmouth city manager administration.

He should have avoided mention of a municipal court.

He should never have mentioned municipal court under any circumstance.

Supposing you were mayor under our present set-up and you received the major portion of your earnings from a mayor's court: and you saw that Gravy Bowl being taken away from you.

Your articles to a newspaper might sound as if your only concern was for the welfare of your fair city, but primarily it would relate to your continued possession of the Gravy Bowl.

If, as Mr. Amey states, no member of the council under the city manager type of government wanted the onerous duties of serving as mayor, (with the Gravy Bowl still attached and the city manager saw the opportunity of very greatly increasing the revenue to the city by creation of a municipal court, is it not reasonable to suppose that a court of this nature would be one of his first recommendations?

Chillicothe has a municipal court which pays dividends, as do all similar municipal court operations. Robert L. Brehmer North Court Street

McDonald Returns To Reformatory

Eugene McDonald of Circleville, an Ohio reformatory parolee, was returned to Mansfield Reformatory Friday by Portland, Me., authorities as a fugitive from justice.

McDonald was to be readmitted into Mansfield for violation of parole granted him last May on a forgery sentence.

The Circleville man was shot in the head last month in a rooming house in Portland during a scuffle with a Circleville Route 4 teenage girl.

The girl was returned to her home here last week when she was cleared of blame in the shooting.

Youth Paralyzed By Intoxication

A 16-year-old Circleville youth was taken into custody Friday night by city police in a state of near paralysis from intoxication.

The youth was found lying in an old car on East Corwin street by Officers Roy Hawks, Bernard Tait and John White.

Police said the youth was unable to move when they found him. Later, he told police he had "found the intoxicant which he drank."

prisoners, the biggest toll of any prison fire.

The breakup of the rebellion was held up an hour by the flashing knives of a dozen case-hardened convicts, who goaded 600 fellow prisoners into keeping up their defiance.

POSSIBLY 100 diehards lingered in the courtyard after the mutiny had fallen apart, eventually forcing guards to bomb them out with tear gas.

The outbreak, primed by a series of other uprisings in prisons across the nation, began in the mess hall at dinner time. Like a flash fire, the mutiny spread until it involved nearly one-half the prison's 4,000-odd population.

The first act of the Halloween drama was brief. Eight hundred of the original 2,000 convicts quickly agreed to return to their cells.

That left 1,200. Guards thought the back of the rebellion, staged to protest food the convicts called "slop" or worse, had been broken.

Just as quickly, the second act started—an uncontrolled riot by 1,200 convicts in the face of a total guard force of 35. Fire after fire broke out.

At one time, about three hours after the riot started, Warden Alvis said, "Nearly every major building is burning out of control."

Firemen, balked by the mass of convicts and the slowness of the guard force, tried ineffectually to fight the sprouting blazes from roof tops and wall ladders.

FIRE DESTROYED five buildings—the commissary, Catholic chapel, laundry, personnel building and prison hospital. About 130 hospital patients were removed safely.

Fire and vandalism seriously damaged the auditorium, mess hall and kitchen.

The convicts, including some of the hardest characters in the Midwest, armed themselves with meat cleavers, sharpened spoons, files, knives, anything that would kill.

They smashed windows, jeered at the guards and screamed curses.

Two hours before the end, four hundred more convicts lost their nerve and sneaked back through the burning buildings to their cell blocks. Then another 200 gave up.

That left 600 still roaming and huddling around small fires.

These were the men threatened to the last by the knife-wielding fanatics, who finally succumbed to the pressure of 250 peace officers and prison guards.

To The Voters of Pickaway County:

Since I will be unable to personally see all the voters before election, I am taking this means to respectfully call your attention to my candidacy for Sheriff of this County on the Republican Ticket. I was born in Washington Township, in this County, in 1907, and am a graduate of the Washington Township High School. At the present time I am farming and following the profession of Auctioneer. I now reside in the City of Circleville and am married and have one daughter. I feel that because of my wide acquaintanceship in the County and business experience, if elected, that I can serve all of the people of this County, efficiently and honestly as your Sheriff.

My opponent, the present Sheriff, has held his office continuously for almost twenty-two (22) years. He now asks for four (4) more years making a total of twenty-six (26) years in office. It would certainly seem that he has had his fair share in office as Sheriff and that it is now "Time For A Change."

I will appreciate your vote and support in this election.

Sincerely,

Willison H. Leist

First Methodist Church Plans 100th Year Ceremony Sunday

Circleville's First Methodist church will look back over 100 years in its present location Sunday with an anniversary program designed to reunite both present and former members in the spirit of old days, old times and old friends.

The congregation was formed in Circleville 136 years ago and, for the last century its church has been located at Pickaway and East Main streets.

The Rev. David H. Jemison, pastor of the church at the time the present structure was built in 1910, will be guest speaker for the 10:30 a. m. worship service. The anniversary program will be directed by the Methodist Men's Club, headed by Dick Plum.

The Rev. Jemison and many other former pastors will speak at the afternoon program, scheduled to begin at 2:30 p. m. Dr. George Wilson, district superintendent, will extend greetings and congratulations to the gathering.

Following a recognition ceremony early in the afternoon to honor those especially prominent in

An unexpected note of high historical interest was added to the story of Circleville's First Methodist church Friday amid plans for marking the church's 100th year at the present location.

Charles Stofer, former custodian of the church here and now a Columbus resident, sent information that led to discovery of the cornerstone left from the church built at Pickaway and Main streets in 1852.

Through a letter sent to Dick Plum, a leader in the anniversary preparations, the cornerstone was found in a near-forgotten upstairs cupboard in the belfry.

The cornerstone appears to be of solid sandstone and about two-by-three feet. It is clearly marked "M.E. Church, 1852."

the church's colorful history, an informal tea will be held in the church's recreation rooms. This part of the program will be sponsored by the Women's Society of Christian Service.

Members of Mrs. George Marion's Sunday School class will honor the founder and teacher of their group as part of the morning activities. Four brass offering plates will be presented in Mrs. Marion's honor.

Supervision of plans for the anniversary observance has been handled by the present pastor, the Rev. Robert B. Weaver.

The congregation's first church at the Main-Pickaway location, built in 1852, was used until 1908. It was razed in that year, preparatory to building the present church which was dedicated May 15, 1910.

For two years, services were held in the Old Baptist church, originally built and used for many years by Circleville Presbyterians.

Prior to 1852, the early history of the First Methodist congregation is closely interwoven with the community's own development.

A historical outline of this early period has been compiled by McEwing Noggle especially for the anniversary celebration. The story, tracing the formal history of the congregation from 1816 up to the present, has been printed in pamphlet form.

A FEATURE of the pamphlet souvenir is a list of the pastors over the span of 136 years.

Among highlights of the early history compiled by Noggle are the following:

About 1815 a class of eight persons was organized and regularly taken under care of the traveling ministry of the church, with Judge McArthur made their leader. Other

Methodists in the locality later joined this group and their first meeting places were log schoolhouses and private dwellings.

When the first courthouse was built in the center of the community's historic circle, worship was transferred first to that building and later to the academy, continuing in the latter location until 1830.

Two lots were subsequently purchased, for $200, next to the Academy on the south side of Watt street, between Court and Pickaway streets. On this site the first Methodist church here was built.

It is believed bricks used in construction of this church may have been made of clay from the old circular wall of the Moundbuilders, near which it was erected.

This first church was a place of worship for the Methodists until it was destroyed by fire in 1851.

Without delay, the First Presbyterian church was offered for preaching services and the basement of the Episcopal church for Sunday school classes.

The Watt street property was sold by the Methodists and plans were later made to move to the Main-Pickaway location.

Part of the newly purchased lot at that time was covered by a pond, a fact that figured in its selection since trustees of the church — by having the pond drained—were thus able to save money in excavation for the basement.

Cost of the first church at the present location is reported to have been $12,000. Only the basement was completed at the time of the dedication, so services and Sunday school were held in the foundation section until the upper parts were well advanced.

The choir will sing an anthem, "More Love to Thee, O Christ," with Mrs. Clark will directing and Mrs. M. W. Burkhardt singing the solo part. They will also lead the congregation in singing the hymns "Come Christian, Join to Sing," "My Faith Looks up to Thee" and "O For a Heart to Praise My God."

At the organ, Mrs. Theodore L. Huston will play "Sursum Corda," "Lift Up Your Hearts," "Benedicite" and "Dona Nobis."

Immediately after the service, elders and their wives will meet in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gearhart.

At 7 p. m. Westminster Fellowship will meet in the chapel for devotions to be led by Elizabeth Musser. This will be followed by a program led by Donna Mitchell in the Social Rooms; with Larry Thornton, moderator. Recreation will be led by Beau and Newell Stevenson.

FIRST METHODIST church will celebrate the 100th anniversary of its present location at Pickaway and Main streets Sunday with a special program. The present church building, above, was dedicated May 15, 1910. History of the congregation here has been traced back 136 years.

Blessing, Curse Theme Due For Calvary EUB

Sunday worship service will mark the beginning of a one-week Evangelistic series in Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church.

The Rev. James A. Herbst will preach Sunday morning, using the sermon theme "God's Mercy, A Blessing And A Curse."

In the evening, Guest Evangelist, Rev. C. L. Kern of Lancaster will be present and bring the message. The Rev. Mr. Kern will be present during the following week and in the two services next Sunday.

Morning service will be a unified service beginning at 9 a. m. Dale DeLong, Sunday school superintendent, will lead in call to worship, Gloria Patri and apostle's creed after the prelude by Miss Minnie Wilkerson. Scripture will be taken from Romans the second chapter the first through the sixteenth verses.

In his sermon, the Rev. Mr. Herbst will point out God's kindness and mercy are a blessing in that they give to mankind an opportunity to repent from sin and to commit their lives to the Christian way. But they also can serve as a curse to mankind in that mankind often interprets the lack of judgment and wrath of God for a time as an indication that God will not ultimately judge man's evil ways and give to him the just reward for his sinful living. In this way many persons are lulled into a self-satisfaction with sinful living, failing to realize that God's mercy in holding off immediate judgment is in the hope that they will see their mistake and change their ways.

Children's department will meet separately for its own worship and classes under the direction of Mrs. Mark DeLong and the teachers of that department.

Evening evangelistic service will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Next Saturday, the members of the Youth Fellowships will go to the Madison Mills' Methodist church for a meeting of the Youth Fellowships of this sub-district and all of the gifts will be presented for the children's home.

Masses on Monday, feast of All Souls' Day, will be at 6 a. m., 7:30 a. m. and 8 a. m. On this feast day, the priest is permitted to say three Masses. Rites Readied For Sunday In Christ Church

Church of Christ meeting at 159 East Main street will have Bible study at 9:45 a. m. Sunday and worship service at 10:30 a. m. The sermon subject for study during all the morning services will be "The Day of Christian Worship."

In a preview of the sermon, Evangelist Charles Cochran says: "In the Bible there are days of religious history connected with sacred events which gave significance to those days. To separate such days from the people and the events that signalize them would render meaningless the days."

"To the Jews, the Sabbath Day was a day of great significance. It was a sign between God and Israel (Ex. 31:12-17). It was first observed after their deliverance from Egyptian bondage and was to commemorate that event (Deut. 5:15). When God gave Israel a day to observe He gave them the same day upon which He Himself had rested in the beginning (Gen. 2:2). Thus the Sabbath day, given only to the Jews (Deut. 5:2-3), would have little significance to anyone today, except as an event in Bible history. It was taken out of the way, with the Law of Moses, and 'nailed to the cross' (Col. 2:14-17)."

"To the Christian the first day of the week is the day of significance. On this day Christ arose from the dead (Mark 16:9); met with his disciples (John 20:1, 19); established His church (Acts 2); and sent the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:1-4). It was on the first day of the week that New Testament Christians assembled to observe the Lord's Supper (Acts 20:7); to give of their means (1 Cor. 16:1-2); and set the example for the day of worship for all succeeding generations. John said, 'I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day.' (Rev. 1:10); possibly a direct reference to the first day of the week, or day of Christian worship."

THE REV. C. L. KERN (above) of Lancaster will be evangelist in Calvary EUB church in a special series next week. Beginning Sunday, the services will be held at 7:30 p. m. nightly through Nov. 8. The Rev. and Mrs. James A. Herbst will lead in the special singing during the series.

NUMBER ONE JOB

Today, your telephone company's Number One job is to help keep America secure. The people of Ohio and the nation depend upon the telephone to get things done. Now that their country is once again building up its military and industrial might for defense, they are finding urgent jobs for the telephone to do. They are calling on the telephone to speed production, to expedite mobilization, to spread warning against attack, and to bolster morale all along the line.

On top of this, they are using the telephone more than ever before in their business and social lives; there is no letup in new civilian demand. But the company must be financially strong if it is to help make the State and nation strong. Its financial strength, like that of all businesses, depends upon its ability to obtain the money it needs to do the job. To do this, our company must have high enough earnings so that people with money to invest will want to invest it in telephone securities.

In other words, the company must earn well if it is to serve well. That is why we have requested an increase in our rates.

WORRY ABOUT JAPAN

APPARENTLY THE RECENT Japanese elections in which the Communists were goose-egged gave too much cheer to those hopeful that Japan is now a staunch ally in opposition to Communists and Red China. There are 60 left wingers in the parliamentary body of 466, and these are fanning the fires of discontent in Japan.

Their propaganda encourages the people of Japan, especially the merchants and labor unions, to think that if they were allowed to trade with China they would be much more prosperous. Because it is American policy that they keep away from China, anti-Americanism is reported to be rising in Japan.

As long as a pro-American government can be kept in power in Japan the situation will not be serious. The Japanese people are notably amenable to government authority. But, taken in conjunction with European neutralism and backwardness about rearmament, the overall picture is not rosy.

Europe would favor surrendering to the Reds in Korea and pulling out. If Europe is opposed to a policy of stiff opposition to the Communists, this country's burden will be still heavier.

As for Japan, it is true, as it has been in the past, that markets must be found for the products of 75 million people crowded into a small land space. Unless the Japanese can sell their manufactures to buy food, they may return to Moscow and Red China.

WANT ADS BIG BUSINESS

WANT ADS HAVE BECOME big business in American newspapers. Once confined to a few columns or a page or two in the metropolitan dailies, every daily newspaper today has a sizable want ad section. Volume of this form of advertising has more than doubled in the last decade.

The reason is, of course, that individuals and business concerns have found that these abbreviated sales messages pull tremendously, whether a business service is offered or a second-hand wheelbarrow is advertised for sale.

In England many papers have always devoted the entire front page to "readers," as they are called there, with the news relegated to inside pages. This style of makeup will not be adopted by American newspapers, but it must be admitted that want ads have become front-page news. Everybody reads them.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Adlai Stevenson, early in the campaign, expressed noble ideals and spoke in a manner which won for him the praise of many intellectuals who felt that here was a literate and cultured candidate who would deal only with the issues.

Then Harry Truman jumped into the fray with the mannerisms of a street-corner dude, shocking young ladies. I should imagine that he shocked Stevenson as much as he shocked Eisenhower. He certainly made votes for the latter. It is Truman who has convinced many persons who were uncertain that it is time for a change.

Unfortunately, Truman set a new pace to the campaign and the tone became vituperative rather than argumentative. For instance, while Eisenhower says that he will personally go to Korea to solve that problem and Stevenson wants to know why he doesn't go to Moscow, nobody has discussed the vital program of General Douglas MacArthur for winning that war.

A speech on Korea without mentioning MacArthur is empty; it would be preferable, from the people's standpoint, to attack MacArthur's accomplishments and program, if they cannot be praised and supported. To ignore the MacArthur saga is to speak of Korea without mentioning Korea.

This is characteristic of a campaign that fell on its face because it was tripped by Harry Truman. He has done this country a disservice because he killed off debate, forcing Stevenson to fight for notice and forcing Eisenhower to defend the integrity of his career. Truman has done this country a disservice by injecting race contentiousness and religious bigotry into the campaign.

What he is fighting for, as an overtone, is control of the Democratic organization in the big cities in the North. There an amalgam was developed under Roosevelt between Democratic bosses, the liberals, the racial groups and those who incorrectly regarded themselves as religious minorities in a country that has no state religion.

This is characteristic of a campaign that former, of the crook and the do-gooder, worked politically to Roosevelt's advantage, but it fell apart under Truman. Boss Flynn of New York lost heart and became ill; Boss Hague of New Jersey was defeated and discredited; Jack Avery replaced Boss Kelly, and so it went over the country. The principal racial group, the Negroes, made more progress under Republican administrations in northern states than at any previous period in history and became powerful in both parties. Anti-Semitism died down, so much so that the Anti-Defamation League was able to make a favorable report as to the situation. Anti-Catholicism became a limited movement led by screwballs.

The amalgam also lacked the strength of the united front of liberals and Communists which began to disintegrate after Soviet Russia became a public enemy of the United States in 1945. Many liberals regretted their former errors. The exposure of Alger Hiss had a profound effect upon the country, particularly after Truman had called the case a "red herring," which it could not have been from the evidence. The

From Atlanta, via Charles Warehouse's Mail Agency, comes a delectable new shaggy dog story. Seems an old prospectus was reminiscing for some eastern tenderfoots. "There I was," he asserted, "trapped in a narrow canyon, with a big grizzly 20 yards away behind a tree. Only way I could hit the critter was to ricochet a bullet off the high canyon wall on my right. 'Well, I'm a champion shot, as you probably know. I just gauged my windage, calculated the lead of the barrel and the rate of twist, the harness of the bullet and the angle of yaw it would have after being smacked out of shape against the canyon wall, and I judged my chances of nailing that bear were about 80-20. A one-rail bank shot. A controlled ricochet. So I took aim and fired.'"

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

PREPARATIONS went swiftly forward. The actual attempt at running the blockade would be made a little after midnight, a time when the light was tricky, yet sufficiently good for landmarks to be seen. Meanwhile, more wood must be taken aboard, for from here on it would be increasingly difficult to obtain.

There was a woodcutter's lot half mile upstream, on the east shore. Two men operated it, but whether they had been killed or had fled was unknown. There was wood waiting, but no sign of the choppers.

The Indians were on the other shore, farther upstream, but some might be in ambush, waiting for an attempt to get the wood. But with crews from three boats, and passengers from the Pride of Kansas for guards, the risk was not great.

A picked party went ashore, well armed, and proceeded to the deserted camp. Rawls was one of them, Whirter in command. Dudley and Earnshaw remained with the packets.

They found a man at the edge of the wood lot, as though he had been surprised at work. He had been dead for several days. There was no sign of his companion, no other reminder of trouble. Low hills rose back from the river, and a considerable growth of trees had been handy. Approximately half of these had been cleared.

"Poor devil!" McQuestion murmured, looking down at the dead man. "They made some money for a while, but he paid for what he got! I wonder what happened to his partner?"

No one had an answer. While the others busied themselves loading the carts, McQuestion wandered about. There wasn't much danger, since watchers had been posted to keep sharp lookout.

To Rawls it seemed that McQuestion was moving with a goal behind his apparent aimlessness. Gradually he approached the patch of still uncut woods, then disappeared. Which might be a foolhardy thing, or a calculated risk.

Two could play that game. Rawls managed to slip away from those whose business it was to keep an eye on him. The woods were gloomy. Voices, low but intent, came from a small, brushy coulee. One was McQuestion's.

"It's agreed, then," McQuestion was saying. "You let the first two boats get past safely. But you sink the third—and take whatever you find on it."

"And we get guns, whiskey?" "You get guns and whiskey, once we're safely past with the first two boats," McQuestion promised. "We'll put them ashore a couple of miles up."

Presently McQuestion wandered back to join the others, reporting regretfully that he had found no sign of the second man who had worked here.

"Mebby the poor devil got away and is still wearin' his own hair," he added piously. "We'll hope so."

Rawls was thinking hard. It wasn't likely that McQuestion and Whirter had planned originally to do any business with this war party, but they were not above dealing with them when necessity demanded—or betraying others to save their own skin. The time spent since the Pride had been fired on had given them the chance to get in communication with the enemy. A few guns and a cask of whiskey would be a cheap price to pay for immunity for the Varina and the Astrod.

Such a bribe alone would not have been enough, with some renegade who knew his ability to sink the boats as they struggled through the Devil's Spin. But with one boat promised as a victim, and many passengers on board to yield scalps, a deal had been made. Whether or not it would be honored was another question.

This was a cold-blooded business, scarcely surprising in view of what McQuestion had already planned. Dudley was to be double-crossed. Indians would swarm out from both shores in canoes as soon as the Pride was crippled. It was unlikely that a single man would live to tell the tale. If any did, no taint would attach to the boats ahead.

This program couldn't be allowed to proceed. But the proper course of action was not so simple. Rawls might go to Captain Dudley and tell him what happened. If he did, Dudley was sufficiently hot-tempered that he'd demand a show-down then and there. That would pit Rawls' word against McQuestion's, and the latter would of course deny the whole thing. Whirter and Earnshaw would back McQuestion, bringing to light his own downriver record, the cloud of his reputation.

As a last resort, Rawls decided, he'd tell Dudley the facts, but only as a last desperate chance. The outcome was so one-sided as to be almost a foregone conclusion.

Already his mind was busy with another possibility. It was a risky course, but no more so than the other. If he could work it right, the Pride of Kansas should be as safe as the other river craft. As the wood was being loaded on board, he studied all three boats, noting their positions, cataloguing the chances.

He glimpsed Astrid, leaning pensively over the rail on board the boat of her own name, and though she made a pretty picture, he found himself unstirred by sight of her. His pulse no longer raced like a paddle wheel out of water, and the sense of pain had pretty well vanished along with the hopes of her once had cherished. Part of that, he supposed, was due to discovering her duplicity, to the surmise that, however, angelic she might at times appear, she was the daughter of her father.

But a part of his healing came from the presence during these weeks of Kathleen Garrison. She had shown a steady courage in the face of adversity which had compelled his attention, and they were partners in disaster. If there were shallows in Astrid, there were depths in Kathleen.

Thought of her now was torment. However his case came out, he supposed, would become manifest, and Dudley, once past the blockade, would no longer be around to befriend him, in turn, or to act as a deterrent upon the others. But that was a bridge to be crossed when reached.

"Pardon me, Captain, but shouldn't you be dressing?" Barnshaw had come up and was watching with an amused glint in his eye. The man might be a villain, but he was capable of appreciating the sardonic humor of a situation.

"Dressing?" Rawls glanced down at himself. "I wasn't aware that I'd left off any indispensable garments."

"I refer to the dinner to be held aboard the Astrod. All the captains are being entertained by Mr. McQuestion. Miss Garrison, as owner, will accompany you."

Rawls recovered quickly. Here was more sardonic playfulness on the part of McQuestion. Astrid would be there, and Whirter, as captain of the Astrod. It was a situation calculated to put him in unpleasantly hot water, but that part didn't worry him now. The real trouble was that the dinner would take a lot of time, just when he needed it for something else.

news behind the news

Editor's Note: Every Saturday this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1—"How much of a housecleaning can a new President accomplish in the government, whether he be Stevenson or Eisenhower?" inquires Mrs. F. G. of Bridgeport, Conn.

This question may influence many voters next Tuesday, especially those wanting a change from what we have now.

Answer: There cannot be a vast voluntary or enforced migration from Washington, numerically. Civil Service experts estimate that about 95 per cent of the 2.6 million federal employees are protected by the merit system, although appointments under this safeguard can be manipulated politically. They often are, especially among postmasters.

But there can be a complete and revolutionary change from the standpoint of policy making, the viewpoint of the government and its attitude toward major problems here and abroad. It is estimated, although no figures can be guaranteed as correct, that the President is responsible for the naming of at least 5,000 people to positions of tremendous influence. It may be 10,000.

These include cabinet members, their assistants and advisers in the top echelon; about 3,000 bureau heads and their aides, especially their legal experts; 80 ambassadors and ministers; 300 members of key agencies as their terms expire—Federal Trade, the Federal Reserve, Atomic Energy, etc.

Although it is not generally appreciated, we have an overseas establishment of almost 200,000 people, of whom only about 10,000 are under the merit code. These constitute the far-flung personnel of MSA, Point Four and other diplomatic or economic adventures.

FIGURES FUITE—In answering this important question, however, it is futile to deal in mere figures. After all, the dominating policies and influences of any Administration are determined by the President and an official family of less than 50 men, some of them not on the federal payroll.

Franklin D. Roosevelt and his "brain trust," which never numbered more than 20 men, were responsible for the political, social and economic revolution of the last two decades.

A key figure in the group was Felix Frankfurter, although he held no official position until he was rewarded belatedly with an appointment to the Supreme Court. Others generally unknown were labor and social welfare workers in New York City and elsewhere. They inspired the Social Security and Wagner Acts.

Finally, as in any organization, the little people down below take their cue from the men at the top, either out of loyalty or a desire to be secure in their jobs. That is the most important consideration with respect to the "time for a change" issue.

PARTY CLAIMS—"Can any political party claim credit for prosperity or blame the opposition for depressions?" asks Mrs. A. W. M. of Houston, Tex., in a provocative letter too long to be reprinted here. She continues, interestingly: "Does either party have a monopoly in controlling the weather, animal diseases, the attacks of insects, floods and droughts, human consumption here and abroad, or use many other factors which influence the law of supply and demand for labor and goods?"

Answer: It is, of course, nonsense for any party to make such claims, unless its members also contend that they were responsible for the birth of Eli Whitney, Thomas Edison, Henry Ford, as well as the financiers and executives who adapted their improvements in human living to everyday use.

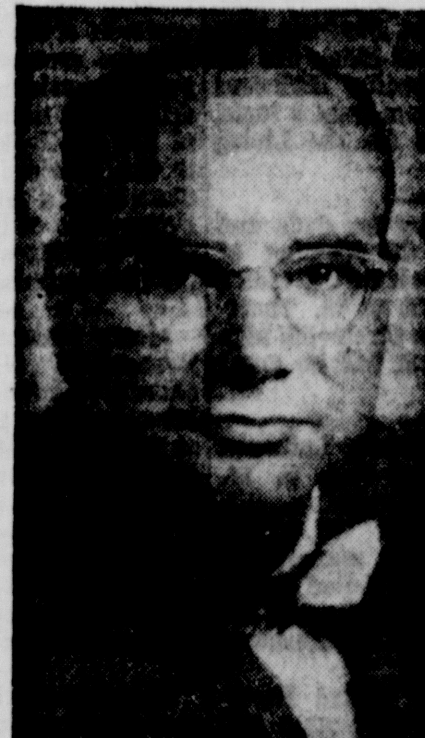

Such a contention is an insult to the millions of Americans, alive and dead, whose labor in the factories or on the farms give us the engine behind our material strength—the assembly line.

I doubt if any of the politicians ranting about their contributions to good times could handle the simplest task on a modern farm or in a streamlined factory.

EDUCATION—"Would you please compare the amount of formal education of Stevenson and Eisenhower," writes Mrs. E. C. of Santa Ana, Calif. In every mention of Stevenson, it is emphasized that he is highly educated. Is not a West Point graduate also highly educated, as compared to college graduates?"

Answer: Eisenhower's only formal education was obtained at West Point, where there is a limited emphasis on the liberal arts. Stevenson attended Choate School and got an A. B. degree at Princeton. Subsequently, he won a law degree at Harvard and Northwestern University. So far as formal education is concerned, Stevenson has an unquestionable advantage. Moreover, he has read and studied, especially along liberal lines, more assiduously than Ike, who has been a man of action rather than a scholar. It should be noted, however, and without reference to either candidate, that formal education does not always give wisdom and intelligence, or even knowledge. Where did Abe Lincoln get those qualities?

WORRY ABOUT JAPAN

APPARENTLY THE RECENT Japanese elections in which the Communists were goose-egged gave too much cheer to those hopeful that Japan is now a staunch ally in opposition to Communists and Red China. There are 60 left wingers in the parliamentary body of 466, and these are fanning the fires of discontent in Japan.

Their propaganda encourages the people of Japan, especially the merchants and labor unions, to think that if they were allowed to trade with China they would be much more prosperous. Because it is American policy that they keep away from China, anti-Americanism is reported to be rising in Japan.

As long as a pro-American government can be kept in power in Japan the situation will not be serious. The Japanese people are notably amenable to government authority. But, taken in conjunction with European neutralism and backwardness about rearmament, the overall picture is not rosy.

Europe would favor surrendering to the Reds in Korea and pulling out. If Europe is opposed to a policy of stiff opposition to the Communists, this country's burden will be still heavier.

As for Japan, it is true, as it has been in the past, that markets must be found for the products of 75 million people crowded into a small land space. Unless the Japanese can sell their manufactures to buy food, they may return to Moscow and Red China.

WANT ADS BIG BUSINESS

WANT ADS HAVE BECOME big business in American newspapers. Once confined to a few columns or a page or two in the metropolitan dailies, every daily newspaper today has a sizable want ad section. Volume of this form of advertising has more than doubled in the last decade.

The reason is, of course, that individuals and business concerns have found that these abbreviated sales messages pull tremendously, whether a business service is offered or a second-hand wheelbarrow is advertised for sale.

In England many papers have always devoted the entire front page to "readers," as they are called there, with the news relegated to inside pages. This style of makeup will not be adopted by American newspapers, but it must be admitted that want ads have become front-page news. Everybody reads them.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Adlai Stevenson, early in the campaign, expressed noble ideals and spoke in a manner which won for him the praise of many intellectuals who felt that here was a literate and cultured candidate who would deal only with the issues.

Then Harry Truman jumped into the fray with the mannerisms of a street-corner dude, shocking young ladies. I should imagine that he shocked Stevenson as much as he shocked Eisenhower. He certainly made votes for the latter. It is Truman who has convinced many persons who were uncertain that it is time for a change.

Unfortunately, Truman set a new pace to the campaign and the tone became vituperative rather than argumentative. For instance, while Eisenhower says that he will personally go to Korea to solve that problem and Stevenson wants to know why he doesn't go to Moscow, nobody has discussed the vital program of General Douglas MacArthur for winning that war.

A speech on Korea without mentioning MacArthur is empty; it would be preferable, from the people's standpoint, to attack MacArthur's accomplishments and a program, if they cannot be praised and supported. To ignore the MacArthur saga is to speak of Korea without mentioning Korea.

This is characteristic of a campaign that fell on its face because it was tripped by Harry Truman. He has done this country a disservice because he killed off debate, forcing Stevenson to fight for notice and forcing Eisenhower to defend the integrity of his career. Truman has done this country a disservice by injecting race contentiousness and religious bigotry into the campaign.

What he is fighting for, as an overtone, is control of the Democratic organization in the big cities in the North. There an amalgam was developed under Roosevelt between Democratic bosses, the liberals, the racial groups and those who incorrectly regarded themselves as religious minorities in a country that has no state religion.

This is characteristic of a campaign that former, of the crook and the do-gooder, worked politically to Roosevelt's advantage, but it fell apart under Truman. Boss Flynn of New York lost heart and became ill; Boss Hague of New Jersey was defeated and discredited; Jack Avery replaced Boss Kelly, and so it went over the country. The principal racial group, the Negroes, made more progress under Republican administrations in northern states than at any previous period in history and became powerful in both parties. Anti-Semitism died down, so much so that the Anti-Defamation League was able to make a favorable report as to the situation. Anti-Catholicism became a limited movement led by screwballs.

The amalgam also lacked the strength of the united front of liberals and Communists which began to disintegrate after Soviet Russia became a publicized enemy of the United States in 1945. Many liberals regretted their former errors. The exposure of Alger Hiss had a profound effect upon the country, particularly after Truman had called the case a "red herring," which it could not have been from the evidence. The Only way I could hit the critter was to ricochet a bullet off the high canyon wall on my right. "Well, I'm a champion shot, as you probably know. I just gauged my windage, calculated the lead of the barrel and the rate of twist, the harness of the bullet and the angle of yaw it would have after being smacked out of shape against the canyon wall, and I judged my chances of nailing that bear were about 80-20. A one-rail bank shot. A controlled ricochet. So I took aim and fired."

FORBIDDEN RIVER

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

PREPARATIONS went swiftly forward. The actual attempt at running the blockade would be made a little after midnight, a time when the light was tricky, yet sufficiently good for landmarks to be seen. Meanwhile, more wood must be taken aboard, for from here on it would be increasingly difficult to obtain.

There was a woodcutter's lot half mile upstream, on the east shore. Two men operated it, but whether they had been killed or had fled was unknown. There was wood waiting, but no sign of the choppers.

The Indians were on the other shore, farther upstream, but some might be in ambush, waiting for an attempt to get the wood. But with crews from three boats, and passengers from the Pride of Kansas for guards, the risk was not great.

A picked party went ashore, well armed, and proceeded to the deserted camp. Rawls was one of them, Whirter in command. Dudley and Earnshaw remained with the packets.

They found a man at the edge of the wood lot, as though he had been surprised at work. He had been dead for several days. There was no sign of his companion, no other reminder of trouble. Low hills rose back from the river, and a considerable growth of trees had been handy. Approximately half of these had been cleared.

"Poor devil!" McQuestion murmured, looking down at the dead man. "They made some money for a while, but he paid for what he got! I wonder what happened to his partner?"

No one had an answer. While the others busied themselves loading the carts, McQuestion wandered about. There wasn't much danger, since watchers had been posted to keep sharp lookout.

To Rawls it seemed that McQuestion was moving with a goal behind his apparent aimlessness. Gradually he approached the patch of still uncut woods, then disappeared. Which might be a fool-hardy thing, or a calculated risk.

Two could play that game. Rawls managed to slip away from those whose business it was to keep an eye on him. The woods were gloomy. Voices, low but intent, came from a small, brushy collee. One was McQuestion's.

"It's agreed, then," McQuestion was saying. "You let the first two boats get past safely. But you sink the third—and take whatever you find on it."

"And we get guns, whiskey?" "You get guns and whiskey, once we're safely past with the first two boats," McQuestion promised. "We'll put them ashore a couple of miles up."

Presently McQuestion wandered back to join the others, reporting regretfully that he had found no sign of the second man who had worked here.

"Mebby the poor devil got away and is still wearin' his own hair," he added piously. "We'll hope so."

Rawls was thinking hard. It wasn't likely that McQuestion and Whirter had planned originally to do any business with this war party, but they were not above dealing with them when necessity demanded—or betraying others to save their own skin. The time spent since the Pride had been fired on had given them the chance to get in communication with the enemy. A few guns and a cask of whiskey would be a cheap price to pay for immunity for the Varina and the Astrod.

Such a bribe alone would not have been enough, with some renegade who knew his ability to sink the boats as they struggled through the Devil's Spin. But with one boat promised as a victim, and many passengers on board to yield scalps, a deal had been made. Whether or not it would be honored was another question.

This was a cold-blooded business, scarcely surprising in view of what McQuestion had already planned. Dudley was to be double-crossed. Indians would swarm out from both shores in canoes as soon as the Pride was crippled. It was unlikely that a single man would live to tell the tale. If any did, no taint would attach to the boats ahead.

This program couldn't be allowed to proceed. But the proper course of action was not so simple. Rawls might go to Captain Dudley and tell him what he intended. If he did, Dudley was sufficiently hot-tempered that he'd demand a show-down then and there. That would pit Rawls' word against McQuestion's, and the latter would of course deny the whole thing. Whirter and Earnshaw would back McQuestion, bringing to light his own downriver record, the cloud of his reputation.

As a last resort, Rawls decided, he'd tell Dudley the facts, but only as a last desperate chance. The outcome was so one-sided as to be almost a foregone conclusion.

Already his mind was busy with another possibility. It was a risky course, but no more so than the other. If he could work it right, the Pride of Kansas should be as safe as the other river craft. As the wood was being loaded on board, he studied all three boats, noting their positions, cataloguing the chances.

He glimpsed Astrid, leaning pensively over the rail on board the boat of her own name, and though she made a pretty picture, he found himself unstirred by sight of her. His pulse no longer raced like a paddle wheel out of water, and the sense of pain had pretty well vanished along with the hopes he once had cherished. Part of that, he supposed, was due to discovering her duplicity, to the sureness that, however, angelic she might at times appear, she was the daughter of her father.

But a part of his healing came from the presence during these weeks of Kathleen Garrison. She had shown a steady courage in the face of adversity which had compelled his attention, and they were partners in disaster. If there were shallows in Astrid, there were depths in Kathleen.

Thought of her now was torment. However his coup came out tonight, his part would become manifest, and Dudley, once past the blockade, would no longer be around to befriend him, in turn, or to act as a deterrent upon the others. But that was a bridge to be crossed when reached.

"Pardon me, Captain, but shouldn't you be dressing?"

Earnshaw had come up and was watching with an amused glint in his eye. The man might be a villain, but he was capable of appreciating the sardonic humor of a situation.

"Dressing?" Rawls glanced down at himself. "I wasn't aware that I'd left off any indispensable garments."

"I refer to the dinner to be held aboard the Astrod. All the captains are being entertained by Mr. McQuestion. Miss Garrison, as owner, will accompany you."

Rawls recovered quickly. Here was more sardonic playfulness on the part of McQuestion. Astrid would be there, and Whirter, as captain of the Astrod. It was a situation calculated to put him in unpleasantly hot water, but that part didn't worry him now. The real trouble was that the dinner would take a lot of time, just when he needed it for something else.

Five State Clubs Hold Sessions

Central Atlantic National Council meeting of the State Garden Clubs was held Thursday in Wade Park Manor, Cleveland, with Ohio serving as hostess to Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

Attending from Circleville were Mrs. Sterley Croman, Mrs. Forrest

Miss Ruth McKenzie of Circleville Route 1. Chrysanthemums will be discussed by the members during the program.

During the morning session, a lecture and demonstration on table setting was given by Mrs. William Williams. She named six principals to be used in table setting, namely: in Ohio the open side of the napkin is to the fork, table settings must be in relation to texture and color, relation of color with carpet and wallpaper, settings must be related to the background, use of a specific theme and distinctiveness. She prepared eight tables with tea, holiday and party settings.

Luncheon was followed by a panel discussion of the five attending state presidents. Each described the club activities and plans in their particular state.

Following luncheon, the group toured the Cleveland Art Museum and the Garden Center, where tea was served. Frank Seidel, author of "Ohio Story," was speaker at the evening banquet. He used as his topic, "Ohio the Beautiful."

Here Are Words Of Ike, Adlai On Major Issues Of Campaign

By The Associated Press

With torrents of words, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gov. Adlai Stevenson have staked their stands on the great issues of modern times.

This is the unadorned story of these words. The general and the governor count on these words, and the ideas they express, to win the way to the White House.

They speak of peace or war, depression or prosperity, tragedy in Korea, success or softness against homefront communism and corruption, human rights, advances for farmers, union labor, surrenders to politicians, smear campaign tactics.

And behind the words of the candidates themselves stand their party platforms.

Voters will decide between them Tuesday.

Point by point, in their own words, here is how they line up, first the candidates and then the platforms, on the major issues:

KOREA

Eisenhower: Kansas City, Aug. 22 — "Really terrible blunders . . . led up to the Korean War. But I do not see how these conditions . . . have been created, how you could stay out of the thing . . . because I believe there would be a great danger if we had not reacted against the communistic forces, we would already be involved in a very much greater and more serious thing."

Philadelphia, Sept. 4 — "We are in that war because this administration allowed America, in a time when strength was needed, to be come weak . . . because having helped set up the Korean republic, and knowing that strength was being massed against that republic north of its borders, there was a failure to build up adequate strength in Korea's own defense forces . . . because this administration abandoned China to the Communists . . . because this administration announced to all the world that it had written off most of the Far East as beyond our direct concern."

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 2 — "The United Nations and America have to stay in that area . . . If we cannot win the war, at least let us not shed so much of our blood . . . There is no sense in the United Nations, with America bearing the brunt of the thing, being constantly compelled to man those front lines . . . Let it be Asians against Asians, with our support on the side of freedom."

Houston, Oct. 14 — "The first job of the new administration will be to deal with this tragic conflict. We cannot expect the same reckless drivers, who ignored the danger signs and ran us into the ditch, to get us out. We must get back on the road to a lasting peace behind a government of men equal to this mighty task."

New Orleans, Oct. 14 — "We will work without resting to get our boys home."

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 15 — "When we find that we have been bungled into a war and there is no plan for winning or stopping the blood price and the treasure price . . . it is time someone was doing some cleaning up . . . They cannot clean it up."

Detroit, Oct. 24 — "The first task of a new administration will be to review and re-examine every course of action open to us with one goal in view: to bring the war in Korea to an early and honorable end . . . That job requires a personal trip to Korea. I shall make that trip. Only in that way could I learn how best to serve the American people in the cause of peace."

Republican Platform — "In South Korea, they (the Truman administration) withdrew our occupation troops in the face of aggressive, poised-for-action Communist military strength on its northern border. They publicly announced that Korea was of no concern to us. Then when the Communist forces acted to take what seemed to have been invited . . . by their happenings orders they produced stalemates and ignominious bartering with our enemies, and they offer no hope of victory."

Stevenson: Aug. 30, Statement to Armed Forces — "The logic of not fighting in Korea . . . is to fight in Wichita. We have yielded neither to the hot-headers who wanted to extend the war nor the weak-kneed who wanted to quit when the going got tough. The Republican leaders, impatient and torn by conflicting counsels, have wavered between recklessness and weakness."

Here Are Words Of Ike, Adlai On Major Issues Of Campaign

By The Associated Press

With torrents of words, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gov. Adlai Stevenson have staked their stands on the great issues of modern times.

This is the unadorned story of these words. The general and the governor count on these words, and the ideas they express, to win the way to the White House.

They speak of peace or war, depression or prosperity, tragedy in Korea, success or softness against homefront communism and corruption, human rights, advances for farmers, union labor, surrenders to politicians, smear campaign tactics.

And behind the words of the candidates themselves stand their party platforms.

Voters will decide between them Tuesday.

Point by point, in their own words, here is how they line up, first the candidates and then the platforms, on the major issues:

KOREA

Eisenhower:
Kansas City, Aug. 22 — "Really terrible blunders . . . led up to the Korean War. But I do not see how these conditions . . . having been created, how you could stay out of the thing . . . because I believe there would be a great danger if we had not reacted against the communistic forces, we would already be involved in a very much greater and more serious thing."

Philadelphia, Sept. 4 — "We are in that war because this administration allowed America, in a time when strength was needed, to become weak . . . because having helped set up the Korean republic, and knowing that strength was being massed against that republic north of its borders, there was a failure to build up adequate strength in Korea's own defense forces . . . because this administration abandoned China to the Communists . . . because this administration announced to all the world that it had written off most of the Far East as beyond our direct concern."

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 2 — " . . . the United Nations and America have to stay in that area. . . If we cannot win the war, at least let us not shed so much of our blood . . . There is no sense in the United Nations, with America bearing the brunt of the thing, being constantly compelled to man those front lines. . . Let it be Asians against Asians, with our support on the side of freedom."

Houston, Oct. 14 — "The first job of the new administration will be to deal with this tragic conflict. We cannot expect the same reckless drivers, who ignored the danger signs and ran us into the ditch, to get us out. We must get back on the road to a lasting peace behind a government of men equal to this mighty task."

New Orleans, Oct. 14 — "We will work without resting to get our boys home."

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 15 — "When we find that we have been bungled into a war and there is no plan for winning or stopping the blood price and the treasure price . . . it is time someone was doing some cleaning up. . . They cannot clean it up."

Detroit, Oct. 24 — "The first task of a new administration will be to review and re-examine every course of action open to us with one goal in view: to bring the war in Korea to an early and honorable end . . . That job requires a personal trip to Korea. I shall make that trip. Only in that way could I learn how best to serve the American people in the cause of peace."

Republican Platform — "In South Korea, they (the Truman administration) withdrew our occupation troops in the face of aggressive, poised-for-action Communist military strength on its northern border. They publicly announced that Korea was of no concern to us. Then when the Communist forces acted to take what seemed to have been invited . . . by their happenings and ignominious bartering with our enemies, and they offer no hope of victory."

Aug. 30, Statement to Armed Forces — "The logic of not fighting in Korea . . . is to fight in Wichita. We have yielded neither to the hot heads who wanted to extend the war nor the weak-kneed who wanted to quit when the going got tough. The Republican leaders, impatient and torn by conflicting counsels, have wavered between recklessness and weakness."

San Francisco, Sept. 19 — "Whatever unscrupulous politicians may say to exploit grief, tragedy and discontent for votes, history will never record that Korea was a 'useless' war, unless today's heroism is watered with tomorrow's cowardice. . . I believe we may in time look back at Korea as a major turning point in history—a turning point which led not to another terrible war, but to the first historic demonstration that an effective system of collective security is possible."

Louisville, Sept. 27 — "Demobilization did go too far and too fast. But it would have gone farther."

Here Are Words Of Ike, Adlai On Major Issues Of Campaign

Gen. George C. Marshall, champion of the inquisition, champion of trial by ordeal and slander."

New York, Aug. 27—"There are men among us who use patriotism as a club for attacking other Americans. To me, this is the last refuge of scoundrels. . . concealed under the cloak of anti-Communism."

Detroit, Oct. 7—"Some people have been impressed by his (McCarthy's) loud talk. But the record is clear. For all his bragging and fear mongering, the junior senator from Wisconsin has yet to produce evidence leading to the conviction of one single Communist agent, either in or out of government."

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8—"I would shudder for this country if I thought that we must surrender to the sinister figure of the inquisition, the great accuser. Then triumphant above all rises the great accuser whose word can brand men's lives, make falsehood true, create evidence when none existed before, and spread through all society the reign of suspicion and terror."

Salt Lake, Oct. 14 — "Because we always thought of government as friendly, not brutal, character assassins and slanderers in the congress, if their conscience permits, can say almost anything. And if my opponent's conscience permits, he can try to help all of them get reelected. But will he have strengthened or weakened the American ideal?"

"A few peddlers of hate and fear would be of little consequence if they had not been included in the leadership of Eisenhower's strange crusade if the general had not yielded. But because of that surrender, our role in world history, our faithfulness to the men who made the United States, is challenged in this election."

Democratic Platform—"Men who are elected to high political office are entrusted with high responsibilities. Slander, defamation of character, deception and dishonesty are as truly transgressions of God's commandments when resorted to by men in public life as they are for all other men."

Eisenhower

Denver, Aug. 23—"I would support him (McCarthy) as a member of the Republican organization. I am not going to campaign for or give blanket endorsement to any man who does anything that I believe to be unAmerican in its methods and procedures. I am not going to support anything that smacks to me of unAmericanism and that includes the kind of thing that looks to me like unjust damaging of reputation, where that man has not the usual recourse of law. We must have a single party responsibility."

"General Marshall is one of the patriots of this country. He is a man of real selflessness. I have no patience with anyone who can find in his record of service for this country anything to criticize."

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 3—"I ask the people of Wisconsin to elect the entire slate that they themselves have nominated for our party ticket. We need them, and they must be part of the team. It is, of course, well known that there have been differences of opinion, sometimes on important matters, between me and other people in the Republican Party. The differences between me and Sen. McCarthy are well known to others. But what is more important is that they are well known to him and to me, and we have discussed them. I want to make one thing very clear. The purposes that he and I have of ridding the government of the incompetents, the dishonest, and above all the subversive and the disloyal, are one and the same. Our differences, therefore, have nothing to do with the end result we are seeking. The differences apply to method."

Milwaukee, Oct. 3—"We would have nothing left to defend if we allowed ourselves to be swept into any spirit of violent vigilantism. To defend freedom demands respect for the integrity of fellow citizens who enjoy their right to disagree. The right to question or challenge a man's judgment carries with it no automatic right to question his honor."

FBI prepared that evidence and the President had access to it earlier than any Congressional committee and could have discovered whether the Hiss case was a "red herring" or a frightening reality.

The exposure of the theft of the atom bomb; the long fight of Senator Joe McCarthy ending in the Tydings Committee whitewash; the Remington and Wadleigh cases; the dismissal of General Douglas MacArthur and the Russell Committee hearings; the Fulbright Committee hearings, the Kefauver Committee hearings; the exposure of corruption, indecency and treachery in high places, disgusted the American people.

Harry Truman could have been nominated for a third term but he declined. His choice, it may be remembered, was Alben Barkley who was turned down by Jack Kroll, who manages the politics of the CIO. Adlai Stevenson represented a Democratic decision that it was time for a change.

But Harry Truman rejects the idea of a time for a change. He wants the old conditions to continue in Washington. He wants his reverses, his cronies, his associates, his ideas to be continued.

He wants to control the political machine that will manage the Democrats in Congress, the Democrats who hold office, the Democrats who are beholden to him. He apparently plans to remain in residence in Washington as a political boss, dominating the President of the United States.

This not even the Democrats want.

New York, Aug. 27—"There are men among us who use patriotism as a club for attacking other Americans. To me, this is the last refuge of scoundrels. . . . concealed under the cloak of anti-Communism."

Detroit, Oct. 7—"Some people have been impressed by his (McCarthy's) loud talk. But the record is clear. For all his bragging and fear mongering, the junior senator from Wisconsin has yet to produce evidence leading to the conviction of one single Communist agent, either in or out of government."

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8—"I would shudder for this country if I thought that we must surrender to the sinister figure of the inquisition, the great accuser. Then triumphant above all rises the great accuser whose word can brand men's lives, make falsehood true, create evidence when none existed before, and spread through all society the reign of suspicion and terror."

Salt Lake, Oct. 14—"Because we always thought of government as friendly, not brutal, character assassins and slanderers in the congress, if their conscience permits, he can try to help all of them get reelected. But will he have strengthened or weakened the American ideal?"

"A few peddlers of hate and fear would be of little consequence if they had not been included in the leadership of Eisenhower's strange crusade if the general had not yielded. But because of that surrender, our role in world history, our faithfulness to the men who made the United States, is challenged in this election."

The exposure of the theft of the atom bomb; the long fight of Senator Joe McCarthy ending in the Tydings Committee whitewash; the Remington and Wadleigh cases; the dismissal of General Douglas MacArthur and the Russell Committee hearings; the Fulbright Committee hearings; the Kefauver Committee hearings; the exposure of corruption, indecency and treachery in high places, disgusted the American people.

Firefighters Win Stubborn Battles In Washington Township

Grass, Brush Blazes Sweep Large Section

Chief Talmer Wise
Says Major Threat
Faces Community

Circleville fire department and volunteers fought a see-saw battle for more than three hours Friday afternoon against a series of five blazes which burned over approximately 125 acres in Washington Township.

The department's township truck was called to the scene, an area ranging from two to five miles east of the city limits, at 2:40 p. m. The flames were finally brought under control about 5:30 p. m.

During that interval, city firefighters, aided by approximately 25 farmland residents and other volunteers from Circleville, waged a difficult defensive battle before there was assurance the blaze could be held to its immediate locality.

A strong wind which carried clouds of acrid smoke and particles of burned foliage and underbrush handicapped those engaged in battling the blaze. With water scarce all over the countryside, the fire truck was returned to the city once to have its tank refilled.

CAUSE OF the blaze was not definitely known.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise said he believes sparks from burning ties along tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad started it. However, railroad crews which joined in the battle were quoted as saying youngsters camping in the vicinity were responsible.

"The railroad has been awfully careless at times in the way they burn their old ties too close to farm property," Wise declared.

Apparently spread by sparks from an original blaze, the flames were fought in five separate spots.

"They were calling for us to help them in two or three different spots at the same time," Wise said. "It was a case that should remind all local residents that our facilities are limited—and that during this dry spell special precautions are needed."

"There were many times during the afternoon when the fire began to edge around us and we had to back up."

IT WAS just mighty lucky that everybody pitched in and helped when they did. It's the only reason we were able to keep it away from buildings and avoid great damage."

One of the worst of the five burning areas was in the vicinity of St. Paul's church.

Shortly after arrival of the truck from Circleville, firefighters succeeded in beating back flames which came within 50 yards of a barn and dwelling on the farm of Bill Clendenen.

Another blaze was then extinguished with difficulty across the road from the Clendenen property before the fire crews hurried about two miles to a burning area on the property of James and Boon Trimmer, Wise reported. Within a short time, other fires were burning out of control on the properties of Charles Winner and Merrill Bowman.

At one time fires were moving steadily toward Pickaway Country Club.

Pickaway County sheriff's office participated in investigation of the blaze.

"I sure hope this fire is going to be sufficient warning to everybody," Wise said. "Conditions are very dangerous. I don't remember a dry spell like the one we're having now."

"As one of the many precautions

18 Elderly Patients Killed In Missouri Rest Home Fire

HILLSBORO, Mo., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Eighteen elderly patients died Friday night as fire roared through a three-story nursing home here.

Most of the dead were trapped on the third floor of the stone structure. Other bodies were found a floor below.

A nurse first discovered the blaze about 5:45 p. m. as sparks and smoke came from a ceiling of the first floor between the main building and an annex.

The fire spread quickly up stairways and along corridors as attendants tried to get the 85 residents, several of them invalids, out of the building.

Hillsboro Fire Chief Richard King said the blaze apparently began in a men's wash room on the first floor. He made no damage estimate on the main building, which he called a total loss.

AT LEAST 36 other residents were reported injured. They were taken in ambulances to hospitals in the St. Louis area. Those not hurt were moved to rest homes in the area.

James Lewis, operator of the home, said many of those dead apparently became confused in the smoke and died of suffocation.

Each floor had a fire escape in addition to inside stairways. Lewis said that must be taken, farmers should plow up or cut away weeds and underbrush which crowd close to their buildings. It's for their own protection."

Big Pumpkin Pie Winners Are Named

After sorting through a mountainous pile of entry blanks, workers Friday announced winners in the guessing contest on the "biggest pumpkin pie in the world," top feature of the 1952 Circleville Pumpkin Show.

Of the 19,000 entry slips turned in, 15 persons guessed the exact weight of 259 pounds for the monstrous pie.

Gene Lindsey, local bakeryman who displayed the pie, said names of the 15 who had guessed the weight were placed in a hat and four drawn out to claim the top four prizes.

Winning first prize in the big contest was Frank Rebrovich of Cleveland.

OTHER WINNERS were Mollie Decher of Plain City, second, and Betty Kocher and Mrs. Earl Rader, both of Circleville, tied for third. Other local persons who guessed the right weight were Jean Shaw,

Ronald Hauker, Charles Gerherelt, Virgil Boysel, Evelyn Boysel, Audrey Boysel, Fred Campbell and

Donald Amey. Lindsey said those who guessed the correct weight but failed to win a special prize will be awarded certificates for specialty cakes from the shop.

A MESSAGE for AMERICANS
from General Eisenhower

Once before I had the honor and duty of leading a crusade for human freedom and dignity—in Europe during World War II.

That crusade was won not by Generals and Admirals but by the blood and effort of American G.I.'s and all the other forces fighting for freedom. Now in 1952 a different call to duty has honored me—as Republican nominee for President of the United States.

This time the effort is civilian—not military. But again, the crusade will be won not by me nor by the political leaders, but by everyday Americans who value their National heritage and are willing to go to the polls and vote to protect it.

THIS IS A CRUSADE TO:

★ SWEEP OUT OF GOVERNMENT the corruption and the scandal which have brought us dishonor at home and disrespect abroad.

★ BANISH THE SUBVERSIVES and incompetents who have crucified both good public service and good public servants.

★ BUILD A STRONG ECONOMY not based on war.

★ SAVE OUR GREAT, FREE NATION from the reckless policies which are leading America down the road bankruptcy — Socialism — and possibly even World War III.

AMERICA NEEDS YOU...in this Civilian Crusade.

I hope that you, too, believe the time has come for a complete change in our National leadership—a change which will restore courage, integrity and faith in American Government.

I INVITE YOUR SUPPORT NOVEMBER 4TH.

Sixteen of the dead were found in the buildings. Two others were reported dead on arrival at St. Louis County Hospital about 35 miles north of the scene.

Hillsboro firemen were joined by men and equipment from four nearby towns. They brought the blaze under control in a little over two hours.

Firemen said they were hampered in getting water onto the flames by "safety screens" on many of the windows.

Missouri Highway 21, on which the home is located, was jammed with fire equipment and ambulances called from hospitals and funeral homes throughout Jefferson and St. Louis Counties. An inquest was scheduled by Jefferson County authorities for Saturday.

A MESSAGE for AMERICANS from General Eisenhower

Once before I had the honor and duty of leading a crusade for human freedom and dignity—in Europe during World War II.

That crusade was won not by Generals and Admirals but by the blood and effort of American G.I.'s and all the other forces fighting for freedom. Now in 1952 a different call to duty has honored me—as Republican nominee for President of the United States.

This time the effort is civilian—not military. But again, the crusade will be won not by me nor by the political leaders, but by everyday Americans who value their National heritage and are willing to go to the polls and vote to protect it.

THIS IS A CRUSADE TO:

- ★ SWEEP OUT OF GOVERNMENT the corruption and the scandal which have brought us dishonor at home and disrespect abroad.
- ★ BANISH THE SUBVERSIVES and incompetents who have crucified both good public service and good public servants.
- ★ BUILD A STRONG ECONOMY not based on war.
- ★ SAVE OUR GREAT, FREE NATION from the reckless policies which are leading America down the road bankruptcy — Socialism — and possibly even World War III.

AMERICA NEEDS YOU...in this Civilian Crusade.

I hope that you, too, believe the time has come for a complete change in our National leadership—a change which will restore courage, integrity and faith in American Government.

I INVITE YOUR SUPPORT NOVEMBER 4TH.

Dwight D. Eisenhower
